| Question                                                                         | Answer                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Do I need previous implant experience before enrolling?                   | No previous implant placement experience is required. The Seattle MaxiCourse supports dentists new to implants as well as clinicians already placing implants who want to expand their skills.                                  |
| What makes the Seattle MaxiCourse different from shorter implant courses? | The Seattle MaxiCourse is a comprehensive year-long program with nine modules and 300+ hours of education, offering deeper clinical understanding, mentorship, participatory training, and a pathway toward AAID credentialing. |
| Who is teaching the course modules?                                       | The program is led by Dr. Senan Najar and Dr. Chad Slocum with guest faculty including internationally recognized educators and field experts.                                                                                  |
| Is this course affiliated with the AAID?                                  | Yes. The Seattle MaxiCourse is approved by the American Academy of Implant Dentistry and provides the required 300 educational hours for participants pursuing AAID Associate Fellow credentialing.                             |

Curriculum & Training

|------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| How is the Seattle MaxiCourse structured throughout the year?         | The program consists of nine modules delivered between September and May. Eight are held in person over three-day weekends, with one online module in December. |
| How many modules are included in the program?                         | Nine modules progressively build diagnostic, surgical, restorative, and treatment-planning skills.                                                              |
| How much hands-on training is included?                               | Participants complete digital planning, restorative workflows, photography, suturing, grafting, navigation, PRF, and other laboratory or simulation exercises.  |
| Will students place implants on live patients during module weekends? | No. Students train through laboratory surgical exercises, cadaver sessions, and live surgical demonstrations performed by faculty.                              |
| Where will the modules be held?                                       | Most in-person modules are held at the 3DBioCAD training facility at 5866 S 194th St, Kent, WA.                                                                 |
| Where will the cadaver modules be held?                               | Cadaver sessions will be hosted at a dedicated surgical training facility (location announced prior to the module).                                             |
| What implant system will be used?                                     | The course incorporates S.I.N.360 implant systems and components, with additional technologies introduced as appropriate to the curriculum.                     |

Career Impact

| Question                                             | Answer                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
|------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| How will this course impact my practice?      | The program strengthens diagnosis, treatment planning, surgical and restorative knowledge, interdisciplinary communication, and complication management, immediately applicable to modern dental practices. |
| How is the course designed for practical use? | The curriculum emphasizes case selection, repeatable workflows, treatment sequencing, documentation, risk management, and communication.                                                                    |
